Request for Permission to Post Photo to Class Website

I am interested in posting the photo I took in class on Wednesday, February 22 to the publicly visible class website https://sites.gatech.edu/robotic-caregivers/ (see above and associated Canvas announcement). I like how clearly engaged everyone is. To me, it's a good representation of a successful day in a problem-based class.

Posting the photo to the class website would make it available to the entire Internet. Since it would be publicly available, people might use it for other purposes. For example, I might use it for a funding proposal, a report to a funding organization that cares about education, or during a public presentation about this class.

I would not post the photo to our class website with any student names in its caption. I will not post it to the website unless I have explicit permission from all of the students in the class, since most of the class members are visible. If you do not want this photo to be available to the public, please do not give me permission to post it. I want to respect your wishes.

Sincerely,
Prof. Kemp
